DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. In view of the Appeal Brief filed on 9/29/03, PROSECUTION IS HEREBY REOPENED. A non-final rejection is set forth below.

To avoid abandonment of the application, appellant must exercise one of the following two options:

(1) file a reply under 37 CFR 1.111 (if this Office action is non-final) or a reply under 37 CFR 1.113 (if this Office action is final); or,

(2) request reinstatement of the appeal.

If reinstatement of the appeal is requested, such request must be accompanied by a supplemental appeal brief, but no new amendments, affidavits (37 CFR 1.130, 1.131 or 1.132) or other evidence are permitted. See 37 CFR 1.193(b)(2).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in-

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or

(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).

3. Claims 6-11, 13, and 15-24, 27-32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Ratzel (5,571,067).

Ratzel discloses a method of determining a total amount of stock material passing through a cushioning conversion machine comprising providing sheet material S, converting material S into cushioning product P, and monitoring passage of stock material through conversion machine 10. Information of the amount of stock material is stored, retrieved, and exchanged with conversion machine 10 by process controller/computer 11. Gear assembly 54 pulls the material from the former 52. The process controller sends and receives signals to the monitoring assembly (length measuring device 12) located near the gear assembly 54 (monitors angular motion of the gear assembly). Thus signals are generated and stored and stored information corresponding with a cumulative length is retrieved by the processor to activate the cutting mechanism. For these purposes the information is considered automatically downloaded. See column 6, lines 48-65.

Ratzel discloses automatically downloading stored information to a remote processor through the use of a bar code system; see column 6, lines 53-58.

Regarding the arguments concerning a total length of material over a period of time which a plurality of cushioning products are made, Ratzel describes monitoring a length of material to be produced in various lengths during a period of time while feeding out the desired length of each individual pad and cutting it to separate lengths; see column 6, lines 48-66. Information of desired cumulative lengths is stored and retrieved in order to operate the successive feeding operations.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 12, 14, and 25-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ratzel (5,571,067) in view of McLean (US 5,322,586).

Ratzel does not directly disclose transmitting information to a personal computer or using a visual display, however McLean teaches a length measuring system with a visual display 8A-8H. The measuring system stores the cumulative data over a period of time and produces an information display for adjusting the web feed process.

Regarding claims 25-26, Ratzel does not directly disclose monitoring/storing information of the cumulative process of producing more than one product, however McLean monitors an entire process and collects data over an extended period of producing more than one product; see figures 8E-8G.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to include a data processing system with a visual display as taught by McLean in the invention of Ratzel in order to assist in monitoring the process of operation.
